No. 1, L'Aguiller Street

Dr. Eric Ponder, Department of Physiology, Edinburgh University, writes in a Home paper: In the eyes of the Ancients, dreams were full of the greatest import and meaning; they were regarded as the messages of the gods, or as the wanderings of the soul from the body. To-day the psychologist con-siders dreams of equal importance, although he finds in them meanings of a very different and much more unpleasant character. Although to the average man neither of these transcendental views is of the least importance, yet he finds his own dreams full of interest, and well worth examining, for there is a great fascination in discovering the

The complainant, Mr. E. L. Stainfield, stated in evidence that he was travelling by the "Star" ferry from Kowloon to Hongkong on Saturday afternoon and in the middle of the harbour the accused used an indecent expression after posting himself at the rear of passing junk. Witness later engaged a motor boat and in company with his wife and Mr. 'W. Anderson of the Naval Hospital overhauled the junk near Arsenal. Street. Witness stated that the accused jumped into the harbour as soon as he boarded the junk and repeated the expression used. Accused denied that he used the alleged expression, and explained his fall into the sea by stating that he was assaulted by the complainant and pushed overboard. The case was adjourned until

EUROPEAN'S COMPLAINT. ,

A Chinese boatman was chargat the Central Magistracy this morning with using obscene

The complainant, Mr. E. I Stainfield, stated in evidence that he was travelling by the "Star" ferry from Kowloon to Hongkong on Saturday afternoon and in the middle of the harbour the accused used an indecent expression after posting himself at the rear of a pany with his wife and Mr. W. Anderson of the Naval Hospital overhauled the junk near Arsenal Street. Witness stated that the accused jumped into the harbour as soon as he boarded the junk and repeated the expression used. Accused denied that he used the alleged expression, and explained his fall into the sea by stating that he was assaulted by the complainant and pushed overboard. The case was adjourned until to-morrow for the examination of other witnesses.

In the first match the Hongkong Volunteers were opposed by the Japanese, the latter having an easy win by 16-4. The second game proved almost a repetition of the first so far as the debacle of one of the opposing teams was concerned, the Hongkong Baseball Club accounting for the defeat of the Indian Recreation, Club by formidable total of 19-5. The scores in each instance, it will be admitted, speak for themselves, and it would be superfluous to describe either match in detail.

The baseballers, however, are to be complimented on setting the lead in the matter of resumption of Saturday afternoon sport in spite of the strike, and now that they have shown the way there is no doubt that other forms of sport will be revived. It is admitted that many of our sportsmen are having rather strenuous times during the week, but that is only an additional reason for the opportunity being afforded them of having some form of healthy relaxation on Saturday afternoons.

VILLA AT LAKE GARDA.

"You (d'Annunzio) stole it from lart critic, who is the rightful owner. I will call on your fellow-Cauthors in Europe and America, to condemn you by a universal protest," writes the Danish author, Madame Karin Michaelis, says the Puris correspondent of the "Weekly Disputch." The letter is arousing a sensation in literary circles.

MODEL-SHIPS.

Model ships of the rarest quality that are on view to the public any day of the week, and are hardly seen by anyone except a prospecive American purchaser, may leave the country in the next lew months. This is the world's most wonderful collection of Stuart and Georgian warship models, worth £20,000 made by the builders of the original ships, presented to the Navy Office and the Admiralty of the time, and subsequently obtained, abstracted, or purloined by navy officials, mong them Mr. Pepys. The collection belongs now to the training ship Mercury, the private establishment in the River Hamble which Commander C. B. Fry has since the death of founder in 1008. The Mercury has no invested funds, no endowment, and no State grant. Its main comimercial assets is the museum—and since hardly anyone eyer goes to visit the museum the temptation part with the treasure is becoming

These Stuart models include what is probably the oldest remaining ship model accurately built to scale. This is the model of one of the ships of the Royal Prince design, if not of the Royal Prince herself, the ship that was the flagship of Jumes Duke of York at the Battle In of Sole Bay. The Royal Prince was built in 1664, and the model is contemporary, so that it is more than 250 years old.

There are models from the French and Spanish Admiralties, and Dutch Admiralty model that is so perfect a sample of the modelwholly to pieces. The original Dutch manuscript catalogue of the parts is also in the collection, it together again.

REASURES ENGLAND MAY

Model ships of the rarest quality that are on view to the public any day of the week, and are hardly seen by anyone except a prospective American purchaser, may leave he country in the next few months. This is the world's most wonderful collection of Stuart and Georgian warship models, worth £20,000 made by the builders of the original slips, presented to the Navy Office and the Admiralty of the time, and subsequently obtained, abstracted or purloined by navy officials, among them Mr. Pepys.

The collection belongs now to the training ship Mercury, the private establishment in the River Hamble directed since the death of founder in 1908. The Mercury has no invested "funds, no endowment, and no State grant. Its main commercial assets is the museum—and since hardly anyone ever goes to visit the museum the temptation to

This is the model of one of the ships of the Royal Prince design, if not of the Royal Prince herself, the ship that was the flagship of James Duke of York at the Battle of Sole Bay. The Royal Prince was built in 1664, and the model is contemporary, so that it is more than 250 years old.

PRINCE'S DOCTOR ON MODERN LIFE.

> 1 . O. 1. PACE THAT KILLS.

Many of the American doctors who last month heard Dr. Mayo, theory that the so-called fast pace debate for charity. of modern civilisation had much to offered the exactly opposite view, that the hustle of modern life and the nerve strain that it entailed, laid people more open to disease.

Sir Thomas Florder, Physician-in-Ordinary to the Prince of Wales, told a gathering of 700 American scoundrels. and Canadian doctors that he belife and the pace at which people incidence of disease, introducing miny new types. He urged doctors to induce their putients to return to a simpler life, and thus ruise their general resistance to disease, and also raise their nerve tone.

THE CONTRARY VIEW.

An entirely opposite view regarding the effect of the modern hustling life is held by Dr. W. J. Mayo, one of the leading medical men of America, who, while in Sydney, 14 months ago, expressed the opinion that the humanis race was not so susceptible to disease as formerly Science, he said, "is gradually eliminating many of the diseases which have ravaged mankind in the cabbage, tomatoes, and fruits." past. Statistics in the United War the average length of life has increased by 12 years, being now 52 years instead of 40 years, and there is every hope that this increase will eventually be doubled.'

SUNSHINE GIRL.

ELOPEMENT AFTER SHAM DEATH,

The weird matrimonial complicaions of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Suilsted, of 'Wisconsin, reached a curiously happy ending. Five years ago Mr. Sailsted, a married man, and his typist, Miss Dorothy Anderson, who, as an amateur actress, earned the nickname of "the sunshine girl," eloped after staging a sinister tragedy. They exhumed a body from a local cemetery, placed it in Mr. Sailsted's bed, and set fire to his residence. Mr. Sailsted's wife was hurriedv summoned from her lakeside summer resort and identified the ourned body as that of her husband. She collected, in all good faith, his ample life insurance, and in due course married a prosperous citizen of Wisconsin.

The insurance company, however, cherished doubts about the body. Their agents, two years ago, indentified Mr. Sailsted and the typist, who had been living as man and wife under an assumed name for three years in California. The couple were brought back to the little town of Fond du Lac Wisconsin, and sentenced to long terms of imprisonment for fraud. Mrs. Sailted meanwhile separated from her second husband. She secured a divorce from the man she had supposed to be dead and remarried her second husband. The criminals went to jail after a dramatic scene in which they pro-claimed to the court "We shall love ench other for ever."

A few weeks ngo Mr. Sailstedwas released on parole. Later the sunshine girl' obtained her
